A Morning with Jane Goodall on Leadership

Using the Force of Nature for Organisational Performance

Over 50 years ago a young Jane Goodall ventured into the forests of Tanzania to help humans learn more about ourselves by studying chimpanzees. Jane's findings changed the way we think about ourselves and how leaders can choose to lead their organisation. She became known as 'the woman who redefined man'.

She has experienced an extraordinary journey and her inspirational story is one of adaptation, resilience, innovation, hope, courage and passion.

She has powerful lessons to share with the Australian business community.

Jane will share insights that help leaders design and lead high-performing organisations by using the force of nature rather than denying or fighting nature.

Dr Goodall will be joined by Andrew O'Keeffe, Director of Hardwired Humans. Humans carry within us 9 instincts that explain how first impressions, gossip, snap judgements, politics, clan connections, hierarchy and status displays show themselves at work and how leaders can make informed choices to create the conditions for high engagement and high performance.

Case studies will be shared by organisations that have applied the framework of human nature to achieve measurable, practical outcomes. Hear from leaders who work with – and don't fight – Nature.

Jane's Birthday Wish

As part of Dr Goodall's legacy and to celebrate her 80th birthday year, Jane would like to relocate 100 orphaned chimpanzees from their fenced Tchimpounga sanctuary to forested islands in the Republic of Congo. Under the watchful eye of the Jane Goodall Institute, these lucky chimpanzees will be able to live out their lives free from poachers in a natural, protected habitat.

A special auction will take place to help us make Jane's birthday wish come true.

We hope you can join us for this memorable experience.
